

Getting alcoholism rehabilitation

There's so many people who need alcoholism rehabilitation. The weird thing in this society is that so many of them are semi-functional, they look normal, they hold jobs, more or less. At this high tech company I was at, a fellow named Mike came to work for us from a well known competitor. We thought that was a great thing until he'd go missing on his way to or from a trade show. When he began pulling other staff down with him, he got fired. But up to that point, he was sort of functional. His addiction was not obvious because so many people drink and drank with him. the worst part is probably that alcoholics are themselves miserable.
